22 october 2006 — the army lawyer — da pam 27-50-401. Background. Military case law illustrates that convening authorities retain broad discretion in how to adhere to Article 25, UCMJ, when selecting the best qualified members. For example, a commander is free to require representativeness in his court-martial panels and to insist that no important segment of the military community—such as blacks, Hispanics, or women—be excluded from service on court-martial panels.<sup>13</sup> doing so, the 1st Infantry Division and Fort Riley's random jury program.<sup>20</sup> Unfortunately, the opinion sheds little light on the mechanics used by the 1st Infantry Division to seat its random panel.<sup>21</sup> The Companies Act 2006 was fully implemented on 1 October 2009.
