Introduction to Anthropology documents human life and possibility. Anthropology studies human life, at the intersection of the sciences and the humanities. An introduction to anthropology encompasses human biology and evolution, archaeology, culture, and language. I currently use Through the Lens of Anthropology: An Introduction to Human Evolution and Culture by Robert Muckle and Laura Tubelle de González as my preferred textbook. The Cultural Anthropology category of blog-posts explores the anthropological idea of culture. Academic anthropology began within a world already shaped by the colonial encounter. Anthropologists launched the idea of culture as a way to counter the racist and determinist justifications for that social order. Anthropology lecture notes intro anthropology study of humans, their activities, ideas, technologies and works in general humans are looked at as members of an. War, conflict, gender, race, inequality, etc. Assumptions of socio-cultural anthropology. Cultural relativism: not to judge/rank but understand from their culture. Comparative perspective: the insistence by anthropologists that valid hypotheses and theories about humanity be tested with information from a wide range of cultures. Ethnocentrism: the attitude or opinion that the morals, values, and customs of one's own culture are superior to those of other people. Culture influences how people feel, perceive, behave, adapt. Change in one idea usually leads to changes in another. An introduction to cultural anthropology will introduce students to the history, methods, and theories of the discipline, while primary attention will be given to the concept of culture as an analytical tool and to the research methods of ethnographic fieldwork. Drawing on material from all parts of the world, we will examine a variety of topics including: culture; kinship and social organization; beliefs and values; economic and political change; language; sickness and healing; resistance and social change. As well, it will provide students with a perspective on the human condition that is global in scope while remaining sensitive to local manifestations of cultural diversity. Films, videos and slide presentations will supplement lectures and readings.
