Its roots, however, go back to the earlier practices of feminist artists like Lynn Hershman Leeson. Cyberfeminism came to describe an international, unofficial group of female thinkers, coders, and media artists who began linking up online. The First Cyberfeminist International was organized by a Berlin collective, satirically named the Old Boys Network after the circles of male privilege on which patriarchy feeds. The collective's five women framed the event, which brought together 38 women from 12 countries at Documenta X in Kassel, Germany, as an opportunity to get [your] hands dirty in the codes and hardware of information technology.
