Free Essay: Title Name Author's Name Subject Organization 1. What contractual issues should the contractor pay special attention to before signing the... However, the construction sector in Malta is plagued by myriad constraints and limitations, rendering the nation acutely incapable of successfully conducting the demolition through local efforts. The staff at the disposal of even the largest demolition contractor in the nation consists of only 20 members, because of which it is ill-equipped to execute an undertaking of this stature and complexity. Consequently, the prohibitions enlisted in the contract must also be studied and adhered to with caution. The Educational Trust of IStructE presented a prize of £500 Essay prize for 2007 to Giancarlo Torpiano of University of Malta and Matthew Ward of University of Southampton. The essays were on the collaboration between architects and structural engineers, and the nature of their relationships. Giancarlo Torpiano said that the importance of a successful relationship between architect and structural engineer cannot be ignored. Essays Related to Malta. 1. The Maltese Falcon.
